Age-Related Eye Problems

Aging is a natural process of living, but so is reading, watching the sunset, and seeing your grandchildren grow up. Don't let eye problems go untreated. With modern technology, malfunctions of the eye can be detected before they cause any damage. Getting regular checkups at your local ophthalmologist can ensure these problems will be diagnosed before they cause other problems.

“With modern technology, malfunctions of the eye can be detected and treated before they cause any damage at all.”

As you age, your body changes and vision loss is one of the most common side effects. Cataracts and uncorrected refractive errors are the two leading causes of vision impairment. Recent scientific studies have also suggested that a positive correlation exists between cataracts and uncorrected refractive errors, and so having one may heighten the risk of getting another.

The key to battling vision loss is an ongoing process that involves awareness through informing yourself on the topic and by undertaking regular eye exams.

“Laser eye surgery, glasses, or contacts prescribed by your local optometrist can have you seeing better in no time.”

Uncorrected refractive errors is a group of complications that can be a direct result of your body changing with age. When focusing on things near or far, eyes alter their shape to be either convex or concave. Throughout time the elasticity in the eye weakens, making it more difficult to contort into these positions naturally. This is called nearsightedness and farsightedness, all normal side effects of growing older. Laser eye surgery, glasses, or contacts prescribed by your local optometrist can have you seeing better in no time.

Over 90% of people over the age of 65 have at least one cataract. At age 75, half of the people have experienced vision loss caused by a cataract. While regular checkups are crucial in monitoring known cataracts, checkups can also help identify newly formed ones.

Treatment options include cataract surgery, a safe procedure that can usually restore all impairment, or physical aids such as sunglasses, brighter lighting, and magnifying glasses for early onset symptoms.

On top of aging, the accumulation of certain behaviors such as not wearing sunglasses, smoking, heavy drinking, and obesity also contribute to age-related vision loss. If you find yourself with a cataract or refractive errors, there is no need to worry. Vision loss due to cataracts, even vision loss caused by uncorrected refractive errors, can generally be avoided altogether.

Why Choose a Grand Oaks Community

At Grand Oaks, we understand the decision to move into an assisted living community is one that involves much consideration. We invite you to take a look at some of the extra services we are proud to offer to all of our residents.

Premier Assisted Living

Peace of mind along with expert care

You will have access to a nurse 24/7 – The safety of our residents is our primary concern. Access to experienced health professionals is vital to seniors as they age. This is why we exceed the state requirement by having a nurse available around the clock.

You will be accompanied on scheduled medical visits – Our experience provides insight into the difficulty seniors face relaying information from physician back to nursing. For that reason, a Grand Oaks staff member accompanies every resident to their scheduled medical appointments ensuring 100% accurate communication. We are here to assist at every turn.

Your care will be managed by local health experts – We have provided the local community with award-winning home healthcare since 1976 and now take great pride in owning and operating assisted living communities. Our company's focus is on health and safety; not on building and selling to the highest bidder.

You will live in the most favorably sized community – Amenities grander than a single family home; services of an elegant resort; yet intimate enough to offer a cozy, home-like atmosphere. It is important to us to know each resident's likes and dislikes, and foster close relationships.

You will be offered an assortment of menu options – Residents are served three chef-prepared meals daily with a menu of over ten options to choose from. Our chef ensures there is always something to please each resident's taste.

You will be eligible for Visiting Nurse Association of Florida VIP services – Residents gain immediate VIP access to all VNA of Florida services such as private caregiver services and home care - nursing, physical, occupational and speech therapy.

Daily LIVING AIDS

Limbs don't work like they used to, but it doesn't mean you have to stop enjoying regular activities. Mechanical daily living aids have been around for centuries. One of the earliest references of the use of daily living aids dates back to 4000 BC in Indian mythology where a warrior queen used an iron prosthetic in place of one of her legs lost in battle. Nowadays, daily living aids aren't just prosthetics or wheelchairs, but a wide array of helpful products that are easily available and make modern day life a little more manageable.

Writing Aids

Having difficulty holding things can be frustrating when trying to write a letter or use modern technology. These actions require precise finger dexterity. Thankfully, slip-on hand aids allow the wearer to forego the use of fingers in exchange for a well-fitting band that goes around your hand. Difficulty pressing buttons that are close together—such as on a keyboard—can be a thing of the past, along with dropping the pen or veering off the page while writing.

Kitchen Aids

It's not uncommon to experience other types of hand deterioration besides loss of dexterity in the later stages of life. Strength, too, can be a problem. Aids such as tippers and jar openers, for example, are great tools to combat this. There are many different kinds out there, from manual to electric. Usually triangular in shape, tippers help you pour things without spilling by keeping things steady, such as kettles.

Opening a jar and pouring some tea may seem like simple tasks but without the use of tools they may be impossible. Having these tools at your disposal can feel very empowering.

“Make modern day life a little more manageable.”

Mobility Aids

Mobility aids assist in improving the mobility of people, such as assisting in walking or allowing a person to forego walking altogether. Depending on the level of assistance needed, there is an assortment of products available. For those with very limited mobility, electric wheelchairs and seated scooters are the best option. There are plenty of customizable options with these: speed, comfort, tire quality, and packaged tools. Other people who still prefer to walk, but have difficulty in doing so may benefit more from walkers or canes. There are even canes that double as grabbers, for reaching things far away.

Signs It's Time FOR HOME HEALTH CARE

Sometimes it is obvious when an extra set of hands is necessary in caring for yourself or a loved one: maybe you frequently leave the stove on all night because you forget to turn it off, or you had a bad fall and realized in that moment, when you were already on the ground, that you are no longer able to pick yourself back up. But it's not ideal to wait for these moments. These are dangerous situations with possible life-threatening outcomes that no one should have to deal with alone. This guide will help you pinpoint early signs that your quality of life may benefit from receiving home health care.

1. Safety concerns

Safety is the number one priority when it comes to taking care of yourself or another human being. If you notice you or your loved one is unable to protect themselves against harm, or are beginning to show signs of forgetfulness in dangerous situations, hiring in-home care can give you or your loved one peace of mind.

2. Mobility is an issue

Basic chores can be a hassle when you have mobility issues. Things like sweeping and doing laundry turn into menacing tasks. People with mobility issues often also have difficulty standing up for long periods of time and because of this, chores such as doing dishes and cooking may feel unbearable. Obtaining the help needed will ease the physical and emotional burden and make it easier to plan and prepare healthy meals.

3. Remain in your home

An aide can assist in dressing, bathing, and basic grooming, among other things, in a respectful and knowledgeable manner to allow you to age at home.

“Your quality of life may benefit from receiving home health care.”

4. Loved ones not able to provide care

For many families, caring for loved ones isn't possible. With work and children, it can all become too much to handle. A home health care aide can help guide the family into a less stressful routine by assisting in the more difficult daily or weekly activities.

PRIVATE CARE SERVICES

VNA of Florida's private care services are designed to provide reliable, compassionate support with activities of daily living while promoting independence at home. We offer flexible scheduling, including the ability to provide up to 24 hours of continuous care when needed. Our private care services are ideal for individuals who require additional support while recovering, managing ongoing health needs, or simply seeking companionship and help with daily routines.

Legal Assistance for Seniors

When do I or my loved one need legal aid?

Legal aid can be required for many varied reasons. One of the biggest categories is life planning. An attorney can be of great use:

- In going over contracts when first moving into an assisted living housing development.
- To help create a living Will, delineate power of attorney, funeral planning, or estate planning.
- Seek advice and gather required documentation in regards to elderly tax benefits, pension, and access to public benefits.
- Drafting advance directives.
- In getting refunded for financial exploitation.

It is important to recognize symptoms of any abuse and get the help required early on.

During this late stage of life, it is often the case that we or our loved ones have to rely on increasing amounts of help from caretakers and are more vulnerable to situations of abuse. Abuse can take the form of:

- Financial abuse.
- Physical abuse.
- Neglect.
- Emotional abuse.
- Scams, such as those over the telephone.

If you or a loved one is being put in this circumstance, it is important to seek legal assistance right away.

How to seek the legal aid

It can be daunting with all the options for attorneys out there. Thankfully there are law practices dedicated specifically to elder law. Hiring an attorney that has a history with elder law or specializes in it can make all the difference.

Straightforward Solutions for Estate Planning, Probate, and Wills

Many only realize the importance of estate planning when a loved one dies without a Will, leaving them to face the probate process.

A compassionate, experienced attorney like Erin Kirkwood can ease that burden.

Known for her honesty, approachable manner, and trusted legal guidance, Erin has built strong relationships within both the legal and local communities.

Practice Areas:

- Probate
- Ancillary Probate
- Estate Planning
- Trusts
- Wills
